WHOLE TOWN TO CELEBRATE

PUBLIC WILL SHARE IN COLLEGE ARMISTICE DAY EVENT.

MANY STORES CLOSE

Radio Program At College In Morning And Football Game In Afternoon Main Attractions.

Celebration of Armistice Day at the State Teachers College is developing into a community affair. Beginning with Wednesday night, Maryville people have been asked to participate in the celebration.

On Wednesday night there will be a big mass meeting at the courthouse in preparation for the annual Maryville-Warrensburg football game of Thursday afternoon. This is a championship game in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and is the crucial game of the season for both teams. Should Maryville win the game, the Bearcats would have a tie for the conference championship cinched, and there would be a possibility of a clear claim to the title.

At this mass meeting Wednesday night there will be short talks by a number of Maryville business and professional men in addition to the pep speeches by students and coaches. The mass meeting will be followed by a parade, in which a band will participate.

On Thursday morning there will be a public assembly at the College at 10:30 o'clock. At this time the dedicatory ceremony at the Liberty Memorial in Kansas City will be furnished by radio through the courtesy of the Price Furniture Co.

And on Thursday afternoon there will be the football game. Maryville will be a "closed up" town during this game. Some fifty local merchants today signed a petition to close their business houses from noon on Thursday. With the exception of soft drink places and barber shops, these business houses will not open again until Friday morning.

The College also will close at noon on Thursday, and students will devote the early afternoon to pep meetings and preparations for the game, which starts at 2:30 o'clock.

And following the game there will be another big celebration. If Maryville wins, Maryville will celebrate, and if Warrensburg wins, Warrensburg will celebrate. A telephone call today from T. C. Reid, the Warrensburg coach, said that in the neighborhood of 100 rooters are planning to make the trip to Maryville. Pep squads and either an orchestra or a band will come from the Central Missouri College.

Following is the petition which was circulated in the business district today:

"Because Thursday, November 11, is Armistice Day, and because the State Teachers College Bearcats have a crucial championship football game with Warrensburg, which we believe our support will help win, we will close our places of business at noon on that day for the remainder of the day."

The petition so far has been signed by:

Price and Null, Buhler's Market, Burton's Cash Grocery, Gaugh & Evans, Donahue and Smith, Price Furniture Co., G. H. Powers, Thompson and Sons, Steel's Barber Shop, F. W. Crow, E. L. Townsend, L. E. Tulloch, Ed Godsey, A. P. Cook.

WORLD PEACE IS DISCUSSED

"IDEAL NATIONALISM" SUBJECT OF R. A. MITCHELL.

"IS CHRIST DIVIDED?"

Presbyterian Pastor Talks on "Imminent Need Of Divine Wisdom."

World Peace was the subject which two Maryville pastors spoke on yesterday. The Rev. R. A. Mitchell of the Methodist Church South chose as his title, "Ideal Nationalism," while the Rev. William N. Dewar of the Presbyterian Church presented "The imminent Need Of Divine Wisdom."

"Modern nations have made notable strides toward an ideal Christian democracy, but we must confess," declared the Reverend Mitchell, "that we honor God with our lips and our hearts are very far away from him."

"In the ears of the nations still sounds the solemn words, 'Why call ye me the Lord, and do not the things which I say,'

"Youthful nations of Europe accepted Christianity in name and carried on two centuries of crusades against infidels. But in their dealings at home with the laborers, serfs and Jews they were unfair."

And taking up the subject of the bible the pastor said: "The Bible is the one great international book. It is to be found everywhere on the face of the earth. What is going to become of it? I cannot tell. I only believe that it makes for a new internationalism. I plead for something deeper and more profound than the reorganization of governments. Ideal nationalism can be achieved only on the basis of the ideal individual. If the ideal nationalism is to be based upon the ideal individual, the nation then must endeavor to live the right life." And here Reverend Mitchell discussed the "Sermon on the Mount."

Speaking from the text, "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" the Reverend Mr. Dewar preached on "The Imminent Need of Divine Wisdom" as a solution to the problem of war.

"The world is suffering from the results of its own wisdom," said Mr. Dewar. "We have a fine sample of it have a in the phrase, 'in time of peace prepare for war.' As Frederick Lynch very aptly remarks, 'we generally do.' Preparation always brings the thing we prepare for.

"The world has tried for two thousand years and longer to keep the peace by preparing for war. We have been diluding ourselves with the idea, during the short intervals between wars, that we have been succeeding, until there comes another war, quite a great deal worse than the preceding one.

"When all the nations, big and little, are obsessed with the same idea, we do little more than create a world that is perpetually afraid of itself."

Succeeding a war to end war, we now have a "peace to end peace," Mr. Dewar declared. He cited the preparations now being made by the various nations for the next confliet.

He denied the necessity of war to settle international questions, and declared "worse than pagan the idea that we can best guarantee our own national safety by a policy of national seclusion."

"We substitute," the pastor said, "national isolation for world brotherhood. We fought for that very thing. Let us then work for the cultivation of the friendship of free peoples the world over.

"Peace is our birth right," he concluded. "We must pay the price for it—the price of unselfishness, good will and brotherly love."

The Rev. R. E. Musgrave did not touch on the subject in his sermons at the First Christian Church, but a program by the young people of the church with world peace as its theme is planned for next Sunday night.

WINTER TO BE HERE TONIGHT

TEMPERATURE TO DROP, RAIN TO TURN INTO SNOW.

GENERAL OVER STATE

Well Below Freezing By Tomorrow Morning, Says Forecast.—Won't Last Long, Brink Believes.

St. Louis, Nov. 8.—Winter will make its first visit into Missouri overnight, the United States Weather Bureau here predicted today.

Rains were general today throughout the state, and forecasts were that the rains during the night, aided by a considerable drop in temperature, will turn into snow, which will be generally state wide.

Forecasts were for temperatures well below freezing by Tuesday morning. The lower temperatures and the snows will be accompanied by high, shifting winds, the forecast said.

J. R. Brink, local weather man, reports that a cold wave will sweep Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa tonight, but that it will be short-lived. Already reports show that it is warmer in the northwestern part of Nebraska, Mr. Brink declared.

Christian Church to Give Lyceum Course

Seven Entertainments to Be Offered as Means to Help Defray Cost of Remodeling.

A lyceum course of seven numbers, the proceeds to be used in defraying the expenses of the recent remodeling at the First Christian Church, will be held by the Bible School of the church, it was announced yesterday.

The first number will be a motion picture, "The Birth of a Race," to be given in the church auditorium Friday night of this week. The picture, it is said, begins with the life of Christ and traces the progress of the human race to the present time. Ten thousand persons appear in the cast, and it required two years to produce the picture.

The second number will be given on December 10. It will be either a recital by members of the music faculty of the State Teachers College or a lecture by Dr. C. M. Chilton, pastor of the First Christian Church of St. Joseph and former pastor of the church here.

Whichever of these two programs is not given on December 10 will constitute the fifth number, set for January 14. Dr. Chilton's lecture will be on the Holy Land, which he visited recently.

On December 23 a home-talent Christmas pageant will be presented by a cast of 150 persons. This will be followed by the fourth number of the course, in the form of a Watch Night party on December 31. The sixth and seventh numbers have not been definitely decided upon, but one of them will be furnished by the Dramatic Club of the Bible School.

GOVERNOR TO ASK NEW TAX

EDUCATIONAL FUND AGAIN PROPOSED IN BAKER PLAN.

WOULD TAX TOBACCO

10 Per Cent Levy Also Would Be Made on Amusements and State-Mined Minerals.

Jefferson City, Nov. 8.—Governor Sam Baker today announced he would ask the next session of the Legislature to create a 10 per cent tax on amusements, tobacco and on state mined minerals in order to create a permanent state educational fund.

It is estimated that the new tax, if enacted, will give the fund $7,000,000 annually.

Today's announcement makes the second time the governor has come out in favor of such a tax in order to create an educational operating fund for the state institutions.

Last year the governor proposed a similar tax. However, he intended to submit the proposal to the voters through the initiative, but was balked through decided opposition from various quarters. At that time, also, there was no organization to circulate the initiative petitions.

In addition to the tobacco and amusement taxes, the new educational fund will have the foreign insurance tax, according to the governor's plan.

A provision will be made to divide the fund on a fifty-fifty basis between the common schools and the higher educational institutions.

Family Away, Fire Badly Damages Home

Sunday Evening Blaze Is Discovered at Linwood Singleton's, 318 South Mulberry.

Fire discovered at 8:30 o'clock last night did serious damage to the home of Linwood Singleton at 319 South Mulberry. It is believed to have started inside the partition between two rooms in the front part of the house.

No one was at home at the time the fire was first seen, and it had a considerable start before the fire department arrived. The kitchen, Mr. Singleton said, was the only room not damaged by fire, smoke or water. He was unable to estimate the damage, but Fire Chief Burt Rowley said it would be at least $500 or $600.

The Singleton house, of frame, story-and-a-half construction, caught fire once before, six or seven years ago, it was said.

After the blaze had apparently been completely extinguished last night, a bed began to burn again and this morning had been completely consumed, but the fire did not spread further.

TWO FACTIONS ABOARD TRAIN

HALF OF QUEEN'S PARTY NOT SPEAKING TO OTHERS.

CARROLL VS. FULLER

Denver Is Next City To Be Visited—Ford Representative On Job.

Aboard Queen Marie's Special Train in Northern Montana, Nov. 8.—A queen today travels across the wilds of the Rocky Mountains, beset by more intrigues than have surrounded her at any time during her court life.

Half the occupants of her special train are not speaking to the other half. Whispered conferences abound. Meaning glances are passed by the members of the same faction when a member of the opposing faction appears.

Out of the maelstrom of tangled hatred have come nuclei of two separate and distinct parties opposing each other at every turn. One faction supports Col. John H. Carroll, official host to the queen and in charge of the special train. The other faction supports Miss Loie Fuller, an intimate friend of Queen Marie and her children.

The division of the camps into two parties was caused by the quarrel between Hill, Washington road builder and owner of Mary Hill castle, which Queen Marie dedicated as a museum, and Major Stanley Washburn, her majesty's special aid.

Carroll defied Washburn and succeeded in expelling Hill from the train, against the hearty protest of Miss Fuller, who was connected with Hill and the museum.

One of the storm centers at present is Miss May Birkhead, Miss Fuller's publicity director, who is charged with conspiring for Hill's return to the train after he had been expelled. It seemed likely that she might leave the train at any time. Miss Fuller, it is believed, will continue the journey as far as Chicago.

While no arrangements have been made for auto transportation at forthcoming stations, it is understood that J. B. Ayres, Ford representative, who was expelled from the train Saturday night, is preceding the train and will be on hand to see that her majesty is transported in Lincoln cars as usual.

The first city to be visited is Denver.

TYPHOON TOLL EXCEEDS 400

DEATH LIST IN PHILIPPINES CONTINUES TO MOUNT.

MUCH OF COPRA LOST

Other Crops, Homes and Shipping are Damaged.—Populace Is Crazed By Catastrophe.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Nov. 8.—The official typhoon death list already exceeds 400, others are being reported constantly and rescuers already have recovered 162 bodies, according to Major Parker Hitchens, chief sanitary officer of the Islands, who today gave the United Press a graphic eyewitness description of the devastated district.

Major Hitchens went to Batangas province in an airplane. He reported that one-sixth of the total copra crop, valued at nearly ten million dollars, was destroyed, while the damage to shipping, homes and some food crops is enormous.

There is no danger of famine, but the populace is so dazed by the catastrophe that it will be days before it can pull itself together.

Ormiston in Middle West, Says Detective

Kansas Citian Claims To Know Hiding Place Of Missing Radio Operator In McPherson Case.

Kansas City, Nov. 8.—Kenneth G. Ormiston, missing radio operator of Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, is hiding in a secluded spot in the Middle West, it is claimed by Claud M. Williams, Kansas City detective.

The district attorney's office today is investigating a story told by Williams, who claimed he was connected with the Aimee Semple McPherson case but who had been given a "raw deal" and was "ready to talk."

Williams said the trunk found in a New York hotel, filled with woman's finery and supposedly left there by Ormiston, was a "fake." Williams said he was the go-between for Ormiston and had transmitted money and messages to him at his alleged hiding place.

13 Convicts Escape From Ohio Prison

One of Prisoners, Two Guards and Warden's Secretary Are Wounded.—Running Gun Battle Follows Break.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 8.—Thirteen prisoners escaped from the Ohio penitentiary this afternoon after a gun fight with guards, in which one convict, two guards and the secretary to Warden Thomas were wounded.

A captain of the prison guards and a telephone switchboard operator were clubbed by the convicts in their desperate break.

Shortly after the dash, two of the prisoners were captured, but six others, who seized an automobile to make good their escape, were engaged in a running gun battle with a heavy detail of pursuing police. As the speeding automobile dashed through the residence district police and the convicts exchanged a rapid fire.

The outbreak at the prison came as visitors were being escorted through the cell house.

NO ENCOURAGEMENT FOR WETS.

There is no encouragement for the wets in the result of the various prohibition referenda. There is no evidence that prohibition has been brought any more prominently into the foreground as a political issue. Only in Nevada, which is less than half as populous as any other state, was there in fact a referendum on prohibition. Elsewhere the statements of the propositions were astute examples of "begging the question."—Des Moines Register.

Queen Marie is criticized for "commercialism" when the really surprising thing about her is her moderation. If the Queen wanted to, she could collect $100 apiece from a million free and democratic Americans, just for a royal handshake.

Dr. C. C. James Talks on Constraining Love

"Constraining Love," was the subject chosen by Dr. C. C. James, pastor of the First Methodist Church, for his sermon yesterday morning. "The love of Christ constraineth us," was the text, taken from Second Corinthians.

Doctor James pointed out that man likes control his loves and quoted Horace Bushnell for the authority.

"Every man has a ruling passion, it is secret of the man's personality," the pastor declared.

"We must be lovers of God, but also of Men," was Doctor James closing thought.

Says Opportunities Good in Maryville

J. W. Griest, Speaker Tonight, Sees Need of Changes, But Praises City's Location.

"I would not say that Maryville is the 'best' town I had ever visited, but I would say that the location of your town in a rich agricultural district offers the best opportunity for the merchants of any town that I have ever been in for a long time," said J. W. Griest, general manager of the Retail Merchants Institute of Chicago, who will speak tonight under the auspices of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce at a dinner meeting at the First Methodist Church.

The visitor, however, criticised the "general appearance" of Maryville stores, calling attention particularly to the need of more modern store fronts and display windows, and declaring changes necessary if the merchants are to hold the trade.

Most of the information to be used in his talk tonight, Mr. Griest said, was gathered from research work covering most of the United States and Canada. In the last seven or eight years he has averaged more than 35,000 miles of travel and has averaged more than three dinner talks a week. The "meat" of his discussions, he said, has been taken from personal contact with successes and failures in organizations as well as from interviews with individuals who had succeeded and individuals who had failed.

Mr. Griest had with him an editorial from the Kansas City Star, which he clipped several years ago, describing the campaign to "sell Maryville to itself." He has been using this in other communities as proof of what the smaller towns can do.

Mr. Griest's last talk was given at DeQueen, Ark., Friday night. He was a guest at noon today at a luncheon of directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

Tonight's dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock. More than 115 tickets have been applied for.

Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Wagner and Mrs. Otis Wagner and daughter returned home last night from Winston, Mo., where they spent the week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dalrymple. Their sister, Miss Lu Emma Dalrymple, won first prize in a dancing contest at the Winston High School, which they attended.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Washington.—Can commercial aviation be made to pay without a subsidy?

"Yes," answers the officie of Assitant Secretary of Commerce MacCracken, department aeronautic expert, "it can be made to pay if it can get enough busines."

Why hasn't it enough now? People are afraid of it. Not all are afraid, but so many are that it hasn't yet developed an adequate volume of traffic to put it on a paying basis. The problem is to build up public confidence, as MacCracken's office sees it—and then to keep it built up.

People must be sold on the idea that flying is safe and it actually must be safe. Plane crashes may be no more numerous than railroad accidents, but they are far more spectacular and get a great deal more advertising than any but the very worst railroad accidents.

A couple of persons can be killed in a train wreck and nobody thinks much about it, but let them die in an airplane smashup and the wires will hum.

One plane crash will undo the missionary work of months in aviation's interest. Possibly avaition's average record was better during those months than surface travels, but the public won't believe it.

The safety of commercial aviation must be the real thing. That's the MacCracken solution.

Absolutely sound machines, highly skilled pilots, careful flying, good landing and taking-off places, and plenty of day and night sign post, to keep pilots from straying from charted course, will do the business, MacCracken promises. He plans just these things, under government supervision.

CROY WRITES OF MARYVILLE

THIS TIME IT'S HIS "HOME TOWN IN HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

While He "Dwells" In New York, He "Lives" In Missouri, Says Author.—Likes People.

Again Maryville breaks into the "Big League."

In the December number of Hearst's International, combined with Cosmopolitan magazine, Homer Croy, who confesses that he "dwells in New York but lives in Missouri," writes at length under the heading, "My Home Town."

With the article are four pictures. One shows several persons reading football scores and listening to a radio report of a football game in front of the Democrat-Forum office. Another is of Fred Hull, postmaster, watching Clarence Baker, janitor at the post-office, sweeping off the steps of that building. A third is of Harriett Miller, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Miller, whom Croy describes as having "never seen a drunken man nor heard a man swear, quite a compliment to our town." The fourth shows a group loafing on the sunny side of the courthouse. In this picture are Croy, Lafe Stamper, George Roberts, Walt West and Mr. Pugsley.

Surface Only Scratched.

In his story, Mr. Croy says:

"I have written three novels about it (Maryville) and I feel that I have just scratched the surface.

"You have to live a long time in Maryville to know anything about it. You can see the houses and buildings in an hour, but that's only the hide. It's the pepple here who make the town. There are no rich people here and no poor; they are just about average. There is no poorhouse and nobody has to hire experts to help him wiggle out of his income tax."

It was eighteen years ago that Croy "pulled stakes and drifted to New York, but each year he says, I go back to my home town and sit on the bench in the courthouse yard and enjoy myself.

"Living in New York, as I have to, I feel that I don't know America. I am jammed and crammed and sardined and hear a babble of foreign voices and see sweat-shop workers who know no more about the real spirit and traditions of America than they do of peanut raising in Peru. Why, you could fill the Polo Grounds with them and not one of 'em would know what a whiffletree is! I am for the whiffletree Americans."

After a reference to early times, the author continues:

Knows of Joys and Sorrows.

"I like the people of my home town, I know the big, noble, splendid things they have done in such an offhand manner, and I know the dark tragedies which have stalked through their lives. There's hardly a home in all our little town that hasn't had its little comedy and its grim tragedy—those boon companions that walk in our shadows.

"For instance, there was W. T. Garrett, our mayor, who had ways of running a town entirely his own. One day an Italian with a trained bear came to town and took out an exhibiting license. He stayed day after day and the bear wasn't any too agreeable until the people with children began to wish that he would tell the town goodby. But the Italian and his bear remained on. Then it was that our mayor decided to take things into his own hands. Bill —that was what he was outside of his office—got a small bottle of freezing preparation which made an iceberg seem hot as a curling iron, and watching his opportunity when the Italian was not looking Bill poured some of it on the b'ar. Never, possibly, in all his life did that Italian have such a surprise. The bear began to shake and tremble and giving a leap, started down the street at a wild gallop with the Italian hanging onto the other end of the rope. An hour later, the Italian with his bear had moved to a warmer spot. Oh, we've had many a good laugh over it!

A Hero On Crutches.

"Then on the shadow side there was Lincoln Bent, now dead, but his family are still with us. He will always have the qualities of a hero to us. He was a successful contractor and built stores and schoolhouses and so on. One day he fell and from that time on was paralyzed walking only with the greatest difficulty; a great, big, hulking man he was, swinging unsteadily along on his thin crutches. Did he give up? No, he went right on putting up houses and stores and buildings. To get up into the structure, he would have to be hoisted by ropes and then he would go edging along the scaffolding, and putting his crutches aside, he would go swinging by his arms along the joists.

"Never was he resentful or complaining; fate had given him a bitter blow, but it could not stop him. Life must be lived and he made the best of what it had left him. He died without becoming rich or attracting attention to himself in the world, but he reared and put through school a large family and died an honored and respected citizen in our little town. To us, he was always a quiet, everyday hero. And there are many of them in the world, if we only look.

"As I was passing down the street, a man rushed out from a garage where he was washing cars; he had on high yellow rubber boots and a muddy, spattered blue jumper—well, I suppose the people lolling in the train did not think he cut much of an appearance. But to me, as we shook hands, he looked just awfully good, because I know who he is.

"He is Frank McDougal, and at one time our town was greatly excited over him, because Frank was the first American prisoner captured by the Germans. However humble the work Frank may have to do in our town, he will always be something of a hero to us, for we can never forget that long, anxious day when the telegram was delivered at his mother's little home. In a few minutes it was all over town—and so that's the Frank we now see. But, of course, the people on the train only see the boots and the sweater.

"I dropped into the Bee Hive Shoe Store, run by W. A. Miller—and in my days on the farm I bought many a pair of boots there. Mr. Miller is our oldest merchant in point of continuous service, and a trip back home without talking to him wouldn't be complete. While we were swapping stories his daughter, Harriet, came in. She's a healthy, hearty girl eighteen years old, going to the teachers' college to make a teacher of herself. While we were talking she told me that she had never seen a drunken man nor heard a man swear. That struck me as being a pretty nice compliment to the town, and for that matter, to America.

"The first morning I was back in my home town I went down to the post office to see if any mail had come in and while there I thought I would call on J. Fred Hull, our postmaster, and rapped on the ground glass that now dignifies the door to his office. After a moment the door was opened by Clarence Baker, the colored janitor.

"Where's Mr. Hull? I asked.

"I don't know zacly where Fred is, he said.

"I'll run back and ask some of the other boys.'

"That's what I like about our town. J. Fred Hull was editor and owner of the Tribune, our daily paper, and over the state he is president of press conventions and is considered quite a man, but to the colored janitor he is just Fred.

"People sitting in the train and looking out the window can't see our town. All they can see is the buildings. It's what goes on in those buildings and in those homes that counts. It's the fine spirit that goes to make our town. For instance, looking out the window they might see two old men, one with white hair, and the other thin and stooped, slowly picking their way along the street, the thin little man carrying a cane. In fact, at crossings he has to stop and come up on them sideways. That is all the people on the train see—just two old men shuffling down the street.

North And South United.

"But I see something else. In one of them I see Nathaniel Sisson, G. A. R., and the man who blew the last bugle-call in the Civil War. In the other I see Charles B. Childress, Army of the Confederacy, and he it was who blew the last bugle-call in the Civil War for the Southern Army. The two old men now are great friends.

"When the Armistice was celebrated in our town at the end of the World War, whistles blew, sirens shrieked, bells rang—Oh, it was a great day! A parade was formed and marched down the street—some of the men marching very slowly, for they had on old blue and gray uniforms, and with these were the men who had fought in the Spanish-American War, and also a few wounded soldiers from the Great War. They all marched together down the street, the school children singing, flags flying, until they came to the court-yard, and there on the courthouse steps the two old buglers raised their trumpets in their shaky old hands and together blew the last bugle-call of the Great War and the last bugle-call of what we all hope will be the last war of any consequence in the world. That is what we hope.

"The people looking out the window of the train see just two old men hobbling along the street—that's all. But we don't. We see more.

"That's the reason I like my home town. We're Americans."

Americans Getting Used to Prohibition

Closing of Saloons Has Removed Greated Part of Temptation, Says Director James Jones.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Americans are becoming slowly acclimated to prohibition so that the average man no longer craves alcoholic drinks, in the opinion of James Jones, director of prohibition.

"The closing of saloons and the government's campaign against bootleggers have removed the greater part of the temptation to consume intoxicating beverages," Jones told the United Press in an exclusive interview.

"Citizens are drinking more soft drinks, none-intoxicating cereal beverages, fruit concoctions and other liquids instead of whiskey, beer and rum. More candy and fruit are being consumed in the place of intoxicants.

"Then, too, those who desire beer for a thirst drink can be satisfied with cerial beverage products," he continued. "The near beer being produced today is much better than the first made and tastes just like real beer, without the alcoholic kick."

Jones said Americans are even losing their taste for beer. Near beer valued at $56,811,000 was produced in 1925.

There has been a large increase in grape juice drinkers and other soft beverages," he said. "Beverages manufactured in the non-intoxicating catagory last year were valued at $236,027,00, an increase of more than $8,000,000 in value over the production of 1925."

Change in Youth Is Outward, Says Bishop

Montana Churchman Declares Flappers and Shiek Really Are Morally More Aggressive Than Ever.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 8.—Outwardly, modern youth has changed but inwardly the flapper and the sheik are more aggressive and constructive than at any time in the history of the nation, Bishop Lester Smith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Helena, Mont., told the United Press. Bishop Smith was here attending the semi-annual conference of Methodist church dignitaries.

"The charge that our flappers and sheiks are deteriorating morally is grossly unfair," Bishop Smith declared. "There never was a time when our young people were more aggressive. They are fighting constantly to maintain a higher moral standard than any that ever has prevailed among young people."

Bishop concedes that there "has been a change in our boys and girls—but it is mostly surface—not underneath. "The good stuff is still there," he asserted.

"We have—and all churches have—more young people in church activities than ever before," the churchman said.

Bishop Smith's ecclesiastical ballwick—the state of Montana—voted "wet" in Tuesday's election, voting to repeal the state dry law.

"This was a disappointment to me," he said. "But I do not believe it represents the opinion of the state," he declared.

Predicts Winter Will Be a Long One

Birds And Animals Are Preparing For Extended Period Of Cold Weather.

Livingston, Mont., Nov. 8.—If birds and animals know anything about the weather, it's going to be a long hard winter, predicts M. P. Skinner, field naturalist for Yellowstone park.

"Ground squirrels began to hibernate 10 days earlier than usual," says Mr. Skinner. "Woodchucks went into seclusion two weeks before their ordinary winter bedtime and red pine squirrels started to gather pine cones much sooner than customary. Such nests of hibernating animals as I have opened are a good deal deeper this fall, indicating they are digging to get away from the frost.

"Birds from the north are coming in greater numbers and considerably in advance of the expected time."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

JUDITH MARTIN, young, red-haired, beautiful, arriving to teach in Pendleton University meets an earnest man who rescues her bandbox on the train, but refuses to enter into conversation with her.

As she steps from the train at Pendleton station, a strange young man giant, green-eyed, seizes her, kisses her and without a word thrusts her into a taxi and vanishes.

She meets black-haired MYRA ALDRICH in her boarding house. Myra is violently in love with one ERIC WALTERS.

Judith avoids the kisser on the campus and in faculty meeting, makes the acquaintance of Dr. Peter Dorn, astronomy professor, who as a stranger had helped her with her hatbox on the train.

In a tea shop with Judith, Myra hears that Watters has kissed a girl at the station, on a bet. She rushes home, followed by Judith, and has a fit of tears.

Learning from the college catalog that Judith is a teacher, Myra goes into a tantrum, accusing Judith of deceiving her into making confidences.

Eric unknowingly signs up Judith's Latin class.

He climbs to Judith's window one night to ask her to unlock the door for Myra and is seen descending by a man passing the house.

WILL WETHEREL, popular senior, takes her to a party given by EVE GERHART, attractive widow, of whom DR. PETER DORN and the faculty disapprove. To her surprise she finds Dr. Dorn at the party.

Eric takes her into a sunroom, saying he wishes to talk to her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

The sunroom was in half shadow. Eric struck a match as they walked toward a wicker settee. "Don't want to sit on anybody's lap by accident," he remarked.

Judith paused by a window and stood gazing out at the harvest moon. "If you have so much to say to me, my dear sir, better get started. I don't intend to affront my hostess by staying in here too long, before I've been introduced to her other guests."

Eric came and stood in front of her, both hands thrust doggedly into his pockets. "The first thing I have to do is to apologize for the kiss. Of course, if I had guessed that you were you, I'd not have kissed you, for twenty dollars—no, nor for fifty." Judith said nothing.

He went on. "For two reasons I wouldn't have kissed you—first, I'd have known you wouldn't appreciate it. Second, you're a schoolteacher. I'm sorry I kissed you and I'll never do it again. Now we are quits?"

Judith yawned. "For a moment I couldn't think what you were talking about. But now I remember. You did kiss me once, I believe, at the railroad station. But don't let that worry you. I had quite forgotten it in the press of more important affairs." She grinned in his direction under cover of the shadows.

"Well," said Eric ruefully, "I knew you wouldn't appreciate it at its true worth. But you needn't try to tell me you'd forgotten it. Kisses aren't an everyday diet in the school teaching business."

Judith turned blazing eyes toward him and was pushing past him toward the drawing room they had left. But Eric laid his hand on her arm. "I also intended to beg your pardon for that window-climbing incident, and to ask to be released from the class in Horace. But you already know that the trellis-climbing was mere coincidence. And as for Horace—I've decided I'll stick to it. I think I'm going to enjoy it more than any other course in my curriculum.

Judith did not answer the challenge. She left him and walked back into the other room. Just inside the door she almost bumped into Myra and was about to call out some joking greeting, but the girl walked hurriedly away, keeping her face straight ahead.

Eve was just raising from the couch As she made a dash toward the chafing dish over which several amateur cooks were shrieking, Dr. Dorn was left behind. He approached Judith in a rather shamefaced way. Her caustic words did not reassure him.

"Why didn't you tell me you were coming to the party when I mentioned it this afternoon, Dr. Dorn?"

He looked at her uneasily. "I had no notion of coming then. I've—er—known Eve for many years, in fact since we were children. And it just occurred to me that I hadn't seen enough of her recently. So I dropped in as I was going by."

Will Wetherel interrupted. "What have you done to Myra? Jumping cats! All the time you were in the sunroom with Waters she hung around the door like a restless tiger. When I tried to talk to her she told me to take my conversation and go jump in the lake. Then she ran away upstairs and I haven't seen her since."

Judith laughed. "Well, really, if your conversation is so bad, I can't see why you should blame me. Now go and get me some food."

He came back with a plate and a glass of punch. The latter he did not proffer until Judith reached a hand for it. "It's spiked, you know. Maybe a schoolteacher's better not—" But she had taken it, with a glance over her shoulder at Dr. Dorn, who was looking more and more uncomfortable.

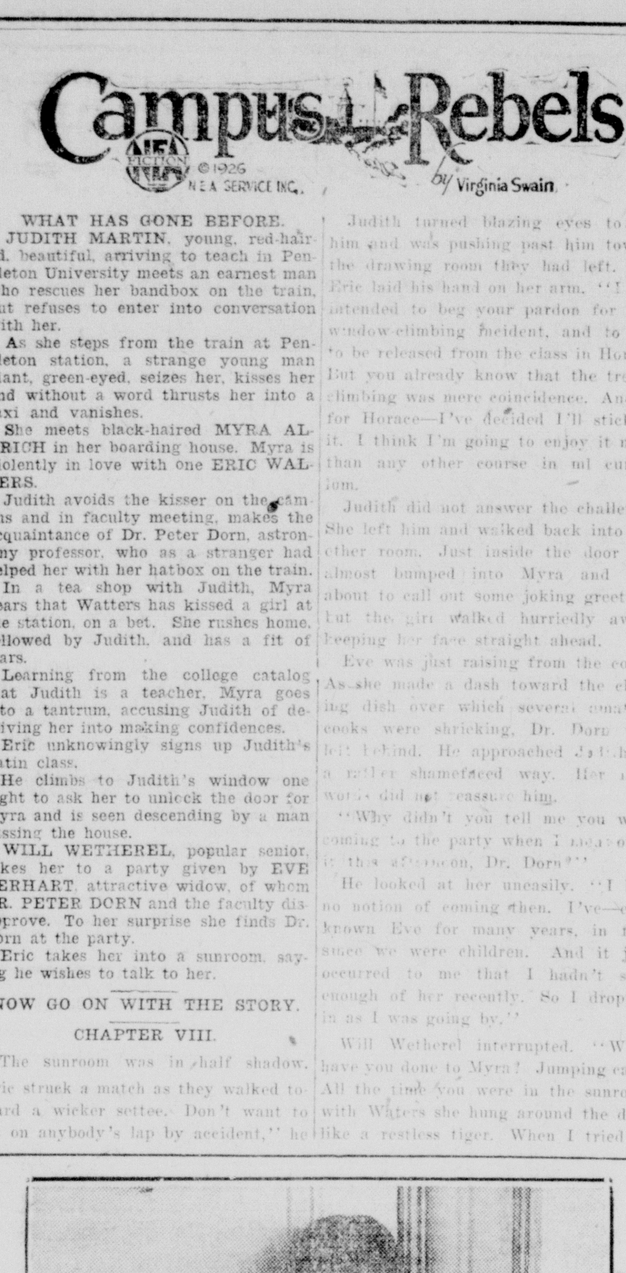
The noise in the room increased. Eve cried above the turmoil, "If anybody wants tea, he'll have to make it in the kitchen. What about you, Dr. Dorn? I'm sure Dean Brown would sanction one cup of freshly brewed orange pekoe."

A roar of laughter went up.

"Oh," breathed Judith, "that was vicious."

"Not at all," countered Will. "He had it coming to him. Eve thinks he's here as a faculty spy. He's never come before. Anyhow, she had to get rid of him somehow."

Judith's eyes were on Dr. Dorn, who had obtained his coat and hat and was making his way toward the front door. "Good night, Peter, called Eve, and several voices followed with "Greetings to Timothy, old dear."



The professor went out without answering.

It was long past midnight when Judith sank back in the taxi beside Will Wetherel, on the homeward drive.

"Pretty good party," mused Will. "But you should see Eve at her best. Dorn's coming sort of cramped her style. She confessed to me after he left that she feared she'd been too hard on him. Seemed to think he might have come just because he wanted to be human and not to spy. She thinks he likes you pretty well, Judith."

The girl said nothing.

"Funny about that man," her companion mused. "Damn strong man in astronomy. Couple of comets and a nebula to his credit. Regular fellow in the observatory, but a perfect grandmother on the purity question. Still, he doesn't interfere much with other people's fun."

He moved a little closer to Judith, so that his sleeve touched her bare arm. She sat quite still. The silver cloth, where her cape fell back, gleamed in the darkness of the cab. The boy's eyes sought her face.

"You're very lovely," he said. "I wish you were dumb. If you were I'd kiss you."

Judith fumbled for her pass key.

* * *

The silver dress was hanging in the closet and Judith was sitting on the edge of the bed, wriggling her toes luxuriously after their release from the silver slippers that lay on the floor beside her, when she heard Eric's racer drive up in front of the house. She looked uneasily at the silver gown, which was thrusting one fold through the closet door. Then she began to brush her hair and prepare for bed.

Pounding steps on the porch below were followed by a slamming of the front door and loud heels on the staircase. Judith sat staring at herself in the mirror, a worried frown between her eyes. Then the door of her own room burst open and in the mirror Judith saw Myra standing in the doorway, her arms outstretched against the door frame.

Judith did not turn away from her fascinated gaze into the mirror until Myra spoke.

"Well," said the girl against the door, "so it was you that kissed Eric at the railroad station." Her voice was sibilant, through sneering lips.

A wave of hot blood surged to Judith's forehead. "No, you're wrong. He only kissed me. I didn't have time to kiss him back."

"You're shameless," breather Myra, rage choking the words. "You're treacherous, too. No wonder you were so kind and sympathetic with me. You wanted to get all the dope on me, didn't you? So you'd know how to work. But I'll tell you this much—you'll fail with him just as I've failed. It's nothing but misery to be in love with Eric Waters." She caught her breath for a moment, then rushed on.

"Thank God I tumbled in time, before you wormed any more secrets out of me. It was the way you looked at him tonight that put me wise—that and your staying in that dark room with him so long. Somebody had said the girl he kissed was red-headed. But I never suspected you. Oh no, you were such a LADY—on the surface."

Judith pushed a chair against the table. The movement seemed to bring her relief. "Look here," she said steadily, "you'd better go to bed. Midnight brawls aren't in my line. Neither are men who kiss strange women against their wishes at railroad stations. Good night."

Myra laughed. "Good thing for you they aren't in your line. For you'll never make any headway with this young man. He was scornful enough when he spoke of you tonight. I made him tell me the truth about it, after I'd caught a word or two from the sunroom that put me wise. But he didn't stand up for you. Just laughed."

Judith walked to the closet, swung open the door and took down the silver dress. "Here's your evening gown. Thank you for lending it to me." She tossed the dress over the back of a chair near Myra's post by the door and walked away to the dressing table.

There was a sound of ripping. The next moment the door slammed. Judith turned around and saw the silver dress lying on the floor. There was a rent from neck to hem.

Most of feminine Pendleton is divided into two camps—the feathered hats and the felt hats. Judith resolves to be neither.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Record Claimed for Quilt of 16,400 Pieces

75-Year-Old Woman of Prairie Hill Spends Four Months in Joining Scraps Given by Friends.

St. Louis, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Amanda Conrad, 75 years old of Prairie Hill, Mo., believes she established a world's record in quilt making when she recently completed a scrap quilt containing 16,400 pieces. Although she sewed on it only at odd moments, it took her but four months to complete the quilt. The scraps were given her by friends after she had announced her intention of making a quilt with a record number of pieces in it. It has been shown at the Macon and Prairie Hill fairs.

The pieces, necessarily small, were cut in triangular shape, and when two were sewed together, made a square of about one and one-fourth inches, Mrs. Conrad said. She used nine spools of thread in sewing them.

"Quilting and knitting have always been hobbies of mine," Mrs. Conrad said, in answer to a questionnaire. "I haven't any idea how many quilts I have made. Several years ago I made one that contained 3400 pieces. The one I have just completed contains more pieces than any ever made in this community. Many persons have asked me if they might buy it, but I intend to keep it, after having put all that work on it."

Mrs. Conrad, who is a widow, has lived in Prairie Hill for the past 33 years. She exhibits quilts, various knitted articles and fancy work at the annual fairs in her community and because of her skill in that line has come to be known throughout that section of the state.

Stable Boy's Statue to Be Put on Tomb

Haj-du-Boszormeny, Hungary.—Laszlo Kordas wishes to be remembered by the world as a "stable boy." For forty years he has been employed at Hortobagy in the lowlands of Hungary.

Kordas is now almost sixty years old. During his life he has saved more than a thousand dollars with which he is now erecting a crypt in which he wishes to be buried when he dies. On top of crypt he is placing a life-size statue of himself at work currying his favorite horse.

Girl's Bobbed Hair Is Cause of Death

Vienna.—Because the neighbors teased her on the day she bobbed her hair, fifteen year-old Marie Kriz of this city committed suicide by jumping from the third-story flat of her parents.

With the permission of her parents, Marie had her hair bobbed. When she returned home her parents were away. A neighbor saw her and began to tease her for having "baby hair." Other neighbors joined in, telling her that she was a fool. Marie was so upset that she rushed upstairs, opened the window, and jumped out. She was killed instantly on the pavement below.

Elmdale, Kan.—Wheat seeding in Chase county is lagging. Many fields in the county are still too wet to permit farmers to get into them. Less than 20 per cent of the usual wheat acreage has been seeded.

West Plains Has Lot for Farmers

West Plains—The City Commissioners have secured a lot for a market square where farmers may leave their teams and wagons. A building on the lot will be used as a rest room.

Work will be started within the next two weeks on a $40,000 gas plant for Cape Girardeau.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Wheat showed unexpected strength on the Chicago Board of Trade today, but weakness in corn prevented any considerable gain by the major grain, although it closed more than 1 cent higher.

Wheat closed up ⅝ to 1¼ cents. Cash prices were considerably higher, 1 to 1½ cents up.

Although opening higher in sympathy with wheat, corn broke sharply and slipped further downward establishing a new low on the crop. Cash prices fell in sympathy, 1 to 2 cents off. Corn closed 1 to 1⅛ cents lower.

Oats continued dull from the break in corn, closing ⅝ to ¾ cent off. Cash prices were steady.

Provisions suffered from liquidation by longs, closing 20 points lower.

PICKERING AND RAVENW'D WIN

COUNTY BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS FOR THE YEAR.

ALL-STARS SELECTED

Guilford, Third Place Boys' Team, Gets Three Positions on Mythical County Quintet.

The All-Star county teams:

Boys' Team.

Reynolds, Guilford, forward.
Anderson, Guilford, forward.
McKee, Pickering, center and captain.
Young, Quitman, guard.
Throckmorton, Guilford, guard.

Girls' Team.

Jones, Burlington Junction, forward.
Comer, Ravenwood, forward.
Daniels, Barnard, jumping center.
Wygal, Ravenwood, running center.
Cole, Barnard, guard.
Kinman, Elmo, guard.

The Pickering boys' basketball team and the Ravenwood girls' sextet are champions of Nodaway County in the court game, by virtue of the tournament held Saturday at the Maryville High School gymnasium.

In the final boys' game Saturday night, Pickering won from the Quitman five, 27 to 6; and the Ravenwood girls were victorious over Barnard, 26 to 24.

In spite of the fact that the Guilford boys' team was eliminated in the semi-finals of the tournament, three places on the mythical all-county team went to members of this quintet coached by Donald Dowell, a Maryville boy. Dowell's team took both forwards and one guard position on the all-star team. The other guard went to Quitman and the center to Pickering.

Honors on the girls' all-star team were divided, Ravenwood and Barnard getting two places each, and one place going to Burlington Junction and Elmo.

The girls' championship game was a thriller. The score was close all the way, and the final whistle found both teams battling right royally for the title.

Comer, Ravenwood forward, led the scoring for the game with nine field goals and four free throws. Dugan of Barnard scored five field goals and four free throws.

The boys' game was rather one-sided, the Pickering basketeers having a decided edge in the scoring department. McGinness, Pickering forward, led the scoring with six field goals. Lett, his running mate, scored five goals. The floor work of McKee, center, was outstanding and his "feeding" was responsible for a number of field goals.

Each team used five men throughout the game.

Three teams were left in the boys' tournament late Saturday afternoon. They drew, and Pickering received a bye into the finals. Quitman defeated Guilford, 21 to 19, in a game which was a thriller from start to finish.

A large and enthusiastic crowd attended the final games Saturday night. Sam Dubin of Bedford, Ia., and J. R. Hann of Burlington Junction were the referees.

KAISER MAY RETURN SOON

"SOMETHING IS DOING" AT WILHELM'S HOLLAND RETREAT.

HERMINE PUSHES PLAN

"Empress" Is Ambitious and Leads in Frequent Secret Conferences.—Propaganda at Work.

Editor's Note: Eight years ago today Wilhelm II. of Germany passed his last day as Kaiser. His Empire was falling asunder before the blows of Allied armies. It was the eve of his abdication and flight to Holland.

Today he lives at Doorn, surrounded with a court which, if less pretentious than that he knew at Berlin, is still cloaked with respect for his divine right to rule. And for the first time since he sought sanctuary in Holland, rumors of his intention to return to Germany to live have become so circumstantial as to gain credence both in those European circles which oppose his return and those which would welcome it.

In order to investigate these rumors and to secure a complete picture of the former Kaiser's daily life, H. C. Buurman of the United Press London staff spent several weeks in Doorn gathering the information set forth in the accompanying article and those to follow.

Buurman's home previously was in Doorn, Dutch is his native language, and he was particularly well equipped in every way to secure the information he sought. In this series of articles the United Press is able to present many details of the ex-Kaiser's daily life never before made public.—United Press.

By H. C. BUURMAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Doorn, Nov. 8—"There is 'something doing' at 'House Doorn.'"

The villagers remark it vaguely. The postman, the telegraph boy remark it more authoritatively.

No hint of it is found in the gloomy beauty of the old oaks and beeches in the park around House Doorn, the ex-Kaiser's "castle" in Holland where the trees are now colorful in their yellows and coppers of autumn.

No hint is found in the external appearance of the White stately house dating from the Fourteenth Century which is reflected dreamily in the dark water of the castle moat overcast by a dull-grey autumn sky.

Nor can one sense any suggestion of restless expectancy in the Dutch county constables who hardly move and look just as though they have just commenced their winter sleep as they stand guard in front of the huge lodge at the entrance of the estate.

But still—there is "something" in the air at House Doorn. The telephone is constantly busy, and the work of the postman and the telegraph boy has been multiplied several times over during the past few weeks.

Nothing is delivered directly to the house itself, but instead is delivered to the huge lodge where Court-Marshal Count von Kinkenstein, with his assistant, Count von Schmettow and their extensive staff are busy on the management of the ex-kaiser's affairs.

Still Holds His Court.

Within this white walled building the ex-Kaiser still holds his "court"—a shadow of the splendor of his pre-war court, but still a court; and the court just now is very busy also. From morn 'till night everybody's hands are filled with "state affairs"—everybody's that is except the Kaiser's who is reported as generally much too busy with talk-fests and wood chopping and other bodily exercises to have much time left to state affairs.

Wilhelm, when one sees him, appears much the same man as ten years ago, except that his hair is greyer and his famous up-turned moustache droops downward and is lost in the ample wilderness of his full grey beard.

But he still talks with a loud voice, still moves his arms wildly sweeping the horizon and indicating with a word or an expressive gesture that he knows the whole meaning of everything.

Therefore, the court-marshal, the "generals" the lackeys, all stand erect with an attentive slant of the head when Wilhelm speaks and everybody praises "His Majesty" for his profound wisdom; just as of old at the famous court at Potsdam.

Thus nearly every morning, the ex-Kaiser gathers his playmates and goes out armed with a hatchet, or ax or saw or garden scissors and with vitality of a much younger man attacks trees or hedges, and appears to be thoroughly enjoying himself.

Empress Takes The Lead.

In the mean time the court-marshal, the advisors from Germany and especially his wife go their silent way and hold conferences, dictate letters, send telegrams, make numerous telephone calls and then late that afternoon or early the following morning lay before Wilhelm a digest of their labors.

To the out-side world this current rumor of the possible return of Wilhelm to Germany has come rather suddenly but to the inhabitants of Doorn it has been obvious for two months or more that something important was brewing. Scores of men prominent in the German "Kaiser Party" have been making trips recently to Doorn, and conference after conference has been held. Usually the ex-Kaiser has been present at the conferences but very often they have been secret conferences between the visitors and "Empress" Hermine and Count von Finkenstein, with Wilhelm excluded.

Then Hermine somewhat unexpectedly left Doorn for Germany, "on a holiday" she said, "a plain ordinary holiday and nothing else."

But she was not gone long when Count von Kinkenstein was discovered to have also gone to Germany. It is rumored too, that the broom and the feather duster have been busy in Wilhelm's former castle "Homburg auf der Hoehe" as a propaganda move, according to well informed sources to re-accustom the public mind to the idea that Wilhelm is once more the full possessor of this famous castle.

Part of Propaganda.

This is but one of a number of similar bits of propaganda it is believed, which will gradually prepare the German mind for the acceptance of the ex-Kaiser's return.

It will certainly take weeks and it may take many months before the ground-work has been completely laid but it is quite firmly believed at Doorn that some dark misty night a big, grey, silent motor-car with blinds drawn will quietly slip down the path from the big white house at Doorn and then when clear of the village suddenly open up and race for the German frontier.

Brought to a halt at the frontier by a German customs-officer or frontier guard a certain passport will be shown and the astonished guard will pale slightly, then spring to attention and bring his hand to the peak of his cap. "Der Kaiser."

With that, the motorcar will start off again at top speed through Germany towards Frankfurt and Weisbaden but turn off the main road a little further to the north and find a welcome at the old and beautiful castle of Homburg auf der Hoehe.

It happened similarly with the Crown Prince, when he left for Oels in East Prussia. Conferences, rumors, denials, more denials; until one day a big grey car speeds through Holland towards Germany leaving the empty shell of a deserted residence to the inspection of curious visitors and tourists.

The Tammany Tiger's Howl of Victory

"'Twas a fine election in New York," roared the Tiger of Tammany Hall as he smacked his lips over the returns. Here are the five biggest stripes in the Tiger's pelt (eft to right), Judge George W. Olvany, Tammany leader; United States Senator Royal S. Copeland; United States Senator-elect Robert F. Wagner; Mayor James J. Walker of New York, and Governor Alfred E. Smith, who was elected to his fourth term.

Bus Company Fined for Lack of License

Montgomery City, Nov. 8.—A fine of $5,000 was imposed here last week against the Yelloway motorbus corporation, of Colorado, for operating a bus line across Missouri without having a Missouri corporation license.

The case against the Yelloway corporation followed in the wake of the accident at Mineola on July 16, when Dewey Newsom, a truck driver, was killed. Newsom was born and reared at Calwood, this county. His wife is now suing the bus company for damages.

The fine, if paid, will go into the Montgomery County capital school fund.

Mrs. Anna Neuens, who has been seriously ill at her home on North Buchanan street, was slightly better today.
